

“My patients
are Montana’s forgotten people.”

Work That Matters

Parti Boggess has been a psychiatric aide at Warm Springs State Hospital for 15 years. When patients arrive at her unit, they are often suicidal or delusional. Parti is part of a team that provides quality, caring treatment and helps patients return to productive lives in Montana communities.

"Mental illness knows no boundaries," Parti says. "It affects all walks of life."

Unfortunately, state budget cuts and staff shortages threaten Parti's ability to continue providing quality care to her patients.

Montana needs Parti Boggess. We're asking legislators to find the revenue to keep Parti, and other state employees, doing the work that matters for Montana's people.
